DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Warfield farmhouse is a two-story frame structure clad in abestos shingle, one bay deep with a three-bay facade (facing west) under a gable roof, ridge parallel to the facade. There is a central entrance , with a small porch on brick piers, and a central cross-gable with a half-round window of fan lights. The cross gable is covered in halfhexagonal shingles, with cornice returns and a scallop molding. porch posts are bracketed and connected with fretwork with central drop finials.

The entrance door has four panels, the upper two with round arches. The gable ends have random shingles, cornice returns and scallop molding. There is a central rear (east) wing of one long bay, one bay wide. The house sits on a granite foundation.

Among the outbuildings are a board and batten drive-through shed and a large barn complex. The major barn is a wooden bank-barn on a granite foundation, located just southwest of the house, with 12 louvered openings on the gable end. The structure's most outstanding feature is its twin stuccoed silos. They stand together under a shingle shake covered roof with conical ends. There are lightning rods at the peaks with metal cones. There are frame gable dormers centered on the cones. At ground level there is a frame connection with a door, six-pane window above. The structure is connected to the barn only at the foundation.

There are numerous other out buildings on the property which add to the general appearance.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Warfield farm is significant primarily for its visual qualities. Its site on the rolling countryside along the Patapaco near Woodstock is particularly beautiful, and the buildings, especially the great barn, add to the scenic environment.
